

Area Highlights

Howell Island Conservation Area is 2,547 acres. The area is located just west of the Spirit of St. Louis Airport along North Eatherton Road. Access to the island is by a causeway over Centaur Chute. When the Missouri River level is 16 feet or higher on the St. Charles gauge, the causeway is flooded and access to the island is by boat only. Use extreme caution whenever attempting to navigate in flood waters. This island area is mostly forested with bottomland trees such as cottonwood and sycamore, but crop and shrub/grass fields also provide important habitat for wildlife. It is surrounded by the Missouri River and Centaur Chute. Howell Island Conservation Area is located in St. Charles County, across the Missouri River from the Weldon Spring Conservation Area. This island was purchased by the Conservation Department in 1978.
